Building on Tradition

Mike and Tracy Nino of Nino Homes

have been building distinctive, attractively-priced living spaces since the early 1990s. The family's history in farming and ranching in Central California reaches back more than 150 years. The Nino Homes team takes great pride in building charming neighborhoods where families can thrive and build their future. Mike directs the planning and building aspects of the business, while Tracy oversees all of the exterior and interior design activities.

At Nino Homes, we know few things are dreamed about, anticipated and planned for as much as owning a new home. And we understand how challenging it can be to find an affordable, well-built home in a desirable neighborhood in the Central Coast area. That's why we're continuing our tradition of adding to the number of new homes in Monterey County—with our latest offering in the inviting small-town of King City.

The Nino Homes Difference

We take as much pride in creating neighborhoods as we do in building distinctive, attractively-priced homes. Each neighborhood we build features homes in a variety of architectural styles, materials and colors, and tree-lined streets and parks that welcome relaxation and recreation, and foster a genuine sense of community.

An outstanding construction team is just one of the reasons Nino Homes continues to earn the respect of homeowners, builders, city planners and people who live in the communities. Mike and Tracy and their team work closely with local subcontractors, suppliers, designers and craftspeople that have helped the company earn a reputation for great value, dependability and enduring quality.

While the goal is to do everything right the first time, each new home comes with a 2-10 Home Buyers Warranty. This includes a 10-year structural limited warranty, paid for by Nino Homes, and a complete Maintenance Manual. Both documents are thorough and easy to understand. And when homeowners have questions or need assistance, they deal directly with company managers who are committed to the highest standards of customer service.

Every member of Nino Homes understands the pride and enjoyment of homeownership. And we take care to make your experience a good one. Our bilingual sales staff is both professional and approachable. They enjoy walking experienced and first-time homeowners alike through the homebuying process.

These factors and more add up to The Nino Homes Difference.
